

Reproduce the Artistic Memory of the Nature
sales center

This project is located next to Fengle Sculpture Park in Taichung, Taiwan. The establishment of this public park aims to accumulate the cultural assets of the country, and integrate the beautiful artistic creation into life.

Therefore, the design core of the sales center extracts the important elements of Fengle Sculpture Park: vitality, aesthetics, and cultural literacy. Through the immersive experience, the interaction between man and nature will be imprinted in the heart.

Nearly 660-square-meter of exhibition space starts from parking to sophisticated landscape, a transitional corridor with steel doors mounted with marbles and glasses, providing a modern and well crafted atmosphere for guests.

The moon-shaped hollow roof of the corridor is designed for an indigenous elm tree to grow through. The tree is evergreen, symbolizing prosperity and sustainability.

Vitality

Entrance Hall Space

The grand and ceremonial entrance along with massive custom-made wall lamps behind reception counter lead visitors into a poetic hallway like a private art museum.

The hall space provides flexible functionalities.

It can be an art gallery with modern and minimal vibes, or a comfy rest area with tranquil landscape through the windows.

Cultural Literacy

The project is not designed only for displaying and consuming purposes, it is also designed to serve as an art gallery or a banquet hall to meet the diverse needs.

Aesthetics

Lounge

In order to provide the ultimate consumer experience, there are five private guest lounges with different views of landscape.

The sandalwood table is the center piece of VIP lounge, combined with hand-carved stone wall to give a natural touch.

The rippled stainless-steel ceiling reflecting the droplet-like chandelier, imitates the sparkling lake in summer breeze.
